The Master of Education in Organizational Management is a 36-credit program designed for professionals from all types of organizations that are facing reform and change in the way they currently operate. The program of study addresses the methods and techniques of enhancing the performance of staff, administrators, other professionals, and work groups in public and private schools and organizations in various fields such as human services, libraries, museums, human resources, and training and development. It also deals with the development of people and processes critical to high performance schools and organizations of higher learning as well as the creation and maintenance of an effective learning culture.

This program is based on the belief that learning leads to change, and those organizations with the ability to learn continuously will be successful in uncertain and changing environments. The courses emphasize individual and team-based learning and development of competencies that are important for the achievement of organizational objectives.

ALL CLASSES FOR THE ENDICOTT COLLEGE MEd in OM PROGRAM
